The school is known for its innovative approach to teaching and for its focus on practical, hands-on learning. The school's resources demonstrate new technologies advancing news production, design and delivery information, and services. Features in information and technology research and centers. JOURNALISM ARCHWAY (180, 10) The two stone lions that stand in the archway between Memorial Union and Jesse Hall have guarded a Confucian temple in China. Zitkala Sa, the Native American schoolteacher and journalist, helped the government give them to the School of Journalism. Today, as the stones, they break the passage to the boundaries of the campus. They are not real.

RESIDENCE ON FRANCIS QUADRANGLE (140, 11) built in 1867, this house is the core of Mizzou pride and tradition. They are all that remain of the university's original buildings. Many notable guests have stayed at the residence, including Mark Twain and Eleanor Roosevelt. In 1960, the residence was declared a national historic site. The Quad — which is sometimes called red campus — is where most of the action happens. The Quad is the center of campus life, and it is a perfect spot for concerts, outdoor events, and other activities. The Quad is located just west of Jesse Hall, and it is accessible via the Brookland and the James B. Nutter Family Information Commons. The Special Collections branch includes exhibits that document the history of the University of Missouri and its role in the development of journalism.

MEMORIAL UNION (81, 19) Memorial Union was built to honor MU students who gave their lives in service to their country during World War II. The MU student body raised $40,000 to build the union, and it was completed in 1941. The union is a popular gathering place for students, faculty, and visitors, and it is located on the north end of the campus. It is open daily from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m., and it is wheelchair accessible.
